Profile

As a lawyer Matthieu Boissavy practices criminal defense, and dispute resolution as a lawyer, a mediator or arbitrator, both amicably and jurisdictionally. His multi-disciplinary approach to conflict resolution takes into account the law, argumentation and behavioral sciences. He is mainly involved in criminal and disciplinary laws, arts and media laws, compliance and human rights. He assists and defends the rights and interests of individuals, corporations, governments and public authorities in crisis situations and disputes. When not acting as a lawyer, he is appointed as a mediator or arbitrator. Within the legal profession, he is committed to defending the role of lawyers and other legal and judicial professions in promoting the rule of law and the defense rights, as well as the promotion of amicable dispute resolution methods.
